Subject: CHANGES IN EAGLE II
AIRCRAFT 912 NAVCOM KIT

Narco Avionics has discontinued manufacture of the Escort 110 radio which has been a part of the 912 Navcom Kit. As a result, we have redesigned the kit to use the Edo-Aire RT-553 radio which is similar in size and configuration, but which is of much higher quality. The enclosed new version of the Eagle II Kit Descriptions booklet shows the new navcom kit and several related additional kits. The latest price list is also enclosed.

We received notification of Narco's plan to discontinue production of the Escort 110 several months ago. At that time we were assured that sufficient inventory of parts was available to complete our remaining open orders. We have now been advised that the inventory estimate was incorrect and that no additional radios are available to us. As a result, we cannot deliver your 912 Navcom Kit in the original configuration, and unfortunately the new 912 Kit is more expensive than the former version due to the use of the higher quality radio.

Please advise which of the following options you prefer for delivery of the 912 Kit which you have on order:

1. I have the 912-L Kit on order. Please deliver the original configuration and I will supply my own Escort 110 radio.
2. I have the 912-L Kit on order. Please deliver the new configuration at the new price and I will supply my own Edo-Aire RT-553 radio.
3. I have the 912 Kit on order. Please deliver the new configuration at the new price and invoice me for any difference.
4. I have the 912 Kit on order. Please change my order to the new configuration of 912-L and I will supply my own Edo-Aire RT-553 radio. Credit my account for any price difference.

Please indicate your preference to us as soon as convenient so that we may process your order in a timely way. Thank you for your cooperation.
